These Answers are designed to give the fullest and most reliable information on each question asked, and are not merely framed with a view of showing how little information may be given by a candidate to enable him to scrape through his examination. A publication on the latter basis would not be of the slightest permanent value, whereas these Answers are compiled with a view to lasting reference, and are bound up in volumes under the title of "THE ACCOUNTANTS' MANUAL," with a copious Index.

It is intended that this book shall be given by the Auditor to the Bookkeeper in cases where it has not been customary for the Accounts to be audited (more especially, perhaps, in small businesses), and where, not infrequently, the Accounts are being kept in a way that does not permit of the Auditor's duties being performed without a needless drain upon his time and patience.

AUDIT NOTE-BOOK. Price 6d. (net) each, 5/- per dozen, 40/- per hundred. Issued in two Series, viz.:—

No. 1—Suitable for a Monthly Audit.

No. 2—Produced in accordance with a suggestion received from Messrs. Turquand, Youngs & Co. Suitable for a Quarterly or Half-yearly Audit. An increased space for "Remarks" is supplied in this series, which cannot fail to prove of use.

A specimen book will be forwarded (post free) 6d. Accountant's name and address will be printed on the Covers free of charge, if 100 or more copies are ordered at the same time.

AUDIT NOTE-BOOK No. 3. (For Important Audits.)

N.B.—If 25 copies are ordered, Accountant's name and address will be printed on cover.

This series is so designed as to be suitable for any business—Manufacturing, Trading, or Financial—and to undertakings of practically any magnitude, while ample space is also afforded for notes in connection with audits that are not quite straightforward. An important feature of the present series is the space provided for entries of Ledger Balances, Trial Balance, &c., rendering the preservation of loose sheets (which so easily get mislaid) quite unnecessary.

AUDITING. Fifth Edition, about 800 pages, price 21s. net.

This Work has been thoroughly revised and partly re-written, and is now in every way up to date.

PREFACE.

IN giving lessons in Bookkeeping I have found a great difficulty in selecting a suitable text-book for the use of the Students. There are many excellent works on the subject, but they are either too expensive or not simple enough for the pupils in the Technical Classes. It is necessary for a student who is to make use of Bookkeeping in Commercial life that he should have only business transactions to work out, and not complicated problems, such as are set out in some text-books. It is a notorious fact that Bookkeeping as taught in schools is a failure, and this is due, no doubt, to a large extent to the need of a suitable text-book.

I am very surprised to find that a large number of clerks who are doing Bookkeeping nearly every day of their lives know so little of the subject, and it is for them and for the evening student that this book is written.

BOOKKEEPING.

THE chief difficulty and stumbling-block in bookkeeping is the most important one—that is, that every transaction requires two entries, a debit and a credit entry, and it is essential to remember this all the way through. The idea is that every transaction involves a “giver” and a “receiver,” and a very simple example will illustrate this. If I sell goods to Brown, he is my debtor—that is, he is the receiver—and I (in the form of some account) am the giver or creditor. The student must be very careful to treat each transaction separately, for though, as far as the example given is concerned, Brown is my debtor, I may have previously owed him money, and, as far as the balance of his account is concerned, I may be his creditor. It is this great difficulty which so often proves a stumbling-block.

The Ledger is the most important book in bookkeeping. It is divided into two parts, the left-hand side being the debtor side (written Dr.), and the right-hand side the creditor side (written Cr.). I give a simple ruling of the Ledger below.

Dr.					Cr.

It is quite possible for a man in business to keep all his transactions in a Ledger without using any other books of account. It is, however, found more convenient for many reasons to subdivide the transactions into other books called the

The words "To," meaning debtor to; and "By," meaning creditor by, are written before the entries in the Cash Book and Ledger.

It is, perhaps, useful to show here that the Sales Book and Purchases Book are parts of the Ledger, as explained on page 8.

The following are transactions of H. Pudge for January 1 1900:—

PURCHASES JOURNAL.

1900			£	s	d
Jan. 1	Stormberg & Co., Goods (details)	..	120	0	0	A
	French Pattern Co., do.	150	0	0	B
	Leaven Cole & Co., do.	130	0	0	C

SALES DAY BOOK.

Jan. 1	F. Brook, Goods (details here given)	10	0	0
	L. Same, do.	15	0	0
	T. Turps, do.	220	0	0

If they had been entered in the Ledger direct to Goods Account they would have appeared as follows:—

Dr.									Cr.
		£	s	d			£	s	d
Jan. 1	Stormberg & Co., A	120	0	0	Jan. 1	F. Brook	10	0	0
	French Pattern Co. B	150	0	0		L. Same	15	0	0
	Leaven Cole & Co. C	130	0	0		T. Turps	220	0	0

The student will notice that Purchases, being additions to stock, appear on the debit side of Goods; and Sales, being reductions in stock, are credits to Goods. Goods sold for cash are not usually entered in the Sales Book, but posted from the Cash Book to Ledger, and so with goods bought for cash.

The best way of keeping the Cash Book is to enter all the money received in Column 2 (see page 8), to add up each day's takings, and to put the total in Column 3, that representing the amount paid to bank. As far as payments go, all are made by cheque, except in the case of petty cash, for which a cheque is drawn at intervals.

It is necessary to treat cash as a person who must be debited with all he receives and credited with all he spends. Entries to the debit of cash go to the credit of some other account in the Ledger, and entries to the credit of cash appear to the debit of some account in the Ledger. This, of course, completes the double entry. If I receive either goods or cash, or anything of value, from a man, I must credit him; if I send goods or cash, or anything of value, to a person, I must debit that person.

The following transactions are entered in the Ledger only in order to give the student a clear understanding as to the items of debit and credit.

John Lewis has the following transactions during January:—

					£	s	d
A	Bought Goods from F. Pollin	20	0	0
B	„ „ „ R. Suter	50	0	0
D	„ „ for Cash	60	0	0
E	Bought Goods for Cash	20	0	0
F	Bought Goods of F. Sea	50	0	0
G	Sold Goods to Rodber	100	0	0
H	Paid Cash to F. Pollin	20	0	0
I	Received Cash from L. Pieter	10	0	0
J	Paid Wages	10	0	0
K	Sold Goods to Turpin	20	0	0
L	Bought Goods of Larkin	25	0	0
M	Paid Rent	15	0	0
N	Received Cash from Rodber	100	0	0
O	Bought New Plant from Sorter	50	0	0
P	Received Cash from Turpin	10	0	0
Q	Bought Goods of Lemon	200	0	0
R	Gave Lemon Bill	150	0	0
S	Sold Goods to Pieter	110	0	0
T	Received Bill from Pieter	100	0	0
U	Allowed Discount	10	0	0

I have not given dates, but letters, which will enable the student to trace the entries in the Ledger.

The explanation of the items is as follows:—

(A) As Lewis receives something of value from Pollin he must credit him in the Ledger and debit Goods, as it increases the stock. B, F, L, Q, are similar items; the individuals are each credited, and Goods Account debited.

(C) Lewis sends goods to Pieter, and must debit him with the value and credit Goods, because it reduces the stock.

G, K, S, are similar items.

(D) Lewis converts goods into cash by taking some stock and selling it for cash; he must debit Cash and credit Goods, as it reduces the latter.

(E) Another cash transaction; but as Stock is increased, Goods must be debited and Cash credited.

(H) In this case Cash is diminished by £20, so he credits it and debits Pollin, who receives the money.

(I) Cash is increased, so must be debited; and Pieter, who is the giver, must be credited.

N is a similar item.

(J) Paid cash for wages. He must credit Cash, as it reduces the balance in hand, and he must debit some account of expenses—such as Office Expenses or Wages. (All expenses are posted to the debit in the Ledger.)

(M) This is another expense, and Cash is credited and Office Expenses debited.

(O) Plant is here an asset, and must be debited; and Sorter, from whom it was obtained, will be credited.

(R) Instead of Lewis paying cash to Lemon he gives a bill, which is an order promising to pay a certain amount at a future date. Lemon must be debited; but it is not right to credit Cash, but an account must be opened for Bills Payable, and this must be credited. "Bills Payable" means "persons to whom I owe money on bills."

(I) In this case Pieter, being the giver, must be credited and Bills Receivable debited, Bills Receivable being an account for persons who owe money on bills. Some traders pay their bills direct to the bank and get them discounted, but this is, of course, expensive, as the bankers make a charge.

(U) This being an allowance to Pieter, he must be credited and Office Expenses debited, this being an item of expense.

The Ledger Accounts will be as follows:—

If the student will take the trouble to add up the debits and credits he will find them agree, and so the double entry will be proved. We have not yet touched upon a very important part of bookkeeping—the Capital Account. When a person opens a business he usually makes out a statement of his assets and liabilities, and this is called a Balance Sheet, and these items form the opening entries for his books. We will take an example. Henry Triumph finds his affairs on January 1 as follows:—

Assets or possessions:—								£	s	d
Due to him by J. Pudge	(1)	20	0	0
Do. H. Sampson	(2)	50	0	0
Machinery and Plant	(3)	1,000	0	0
Stock	(4)	500	0	0
Cash	(5)	100	0	0
Liabilities or moneys due by him:—
Bills payable	(6)	100	0	0
Due by him to Furber & Co. ..	(7)	100	0	0

The student should be very careful to understand that a Balance Sheet is a statement of assets and liabilities; the surplus of assets over liabilities represents Capital.

To open the accounts in the Ledger it is first necessary to start an account headed:—

H. TRIUMPH—CAPITAL ACCOUNT.

	£	s	d		£	s	d
To Bills payable.. (6)	100	0	0	By Cash (5)	100	0	0
„ Furber & Co. (7)	100	0	0	„ J. Pudge .. (1)	20	0	0
				„ H. Sampson .. (2)	50	0	0
				„ Machinery and Plant .. (3)	1,000	0	0
„ Capital ..	1,470	0	0	„ Stock (4)	500	0	0
	£1,570	0	0		£1,670	0	0
				By Balance ..	1,470	0	0

You will see that Triumph is credited with what belongs to him and debited with the amounts he owes, the balance being his capital. As Triumph credits his account with various assets he must open an account for each in the Ledger, the entry being on the Dr. side, and the individuals to whom he owes money must be credited in the Ledger. (These appear on pages 20 and 21.)

Students often find great difficulty in seeing why Capital appears under the heading Liabilities in the Balance Sheet, but if they will remember that it is only a balance they will soon get over the difficulty.

We have to see how capital is affected by trading, and we will enter the following transactions of Triumph and see the result.

I commence with the number "8," as the first seven were capital items, as on page 15:—

In ordinary business the items Nos. 12, 18, 28, would appear as names of persons to whom the money was paid, and the amount posted to the debit of the persons—they would be credited through a Purchases Journal, or, better still, a "Credit Book," which I have explained on page 34.

In making out a Profit and Loss Account for the period, the first thing H. Triumph has to do is to prepare a Trial Balance, or a list of his debits and credits. The balancing of the Ledger sometimes gives a little trouble to students who are not accustomed to it, but is really very simple. First add the greater side, then the lesser, and the difference goes under the lesser side, and the balance then is transferred to the opposite side, thus:—

LEDGER ACCOUNT.

The trial balance which Triumph makes out is as follows :—

In the trial balance the debit balances from the Ledger, of course, appear under the head of "Debits," and vice versa.

The Goods Account needs an explanation. The sales only amounted to £530, whereas the purchases were £920, and yet there was a credit balance on the account in the Ledger!

The explanation is simple. There was stock in hand, which had to be reckoned up on sheets or in a book, amounting to £1,500.

As Goods Account is debited with the purchases, it is only fair that it should have credit for the stock in hand.

The student will at once see that a man may buy only £200 worth of goods and sell the same for £1,000; after some process has been gone through the goods become more valuable.

The Cash Book balance is a credit one; that means that the account at the bank is overdrawn. (In such cases the bank usually asks for some security, unless the overdraft is merely temporary.)

assets appear on the credit side, and the liabilities on the debtor, as in the Ledger Account of the owner. (Notice how the stock is focussed into Profit and Loss Account and Balance Sheet.)

The Capital is altered thus:—

Capital as it stood at the beginning, plus gain for the period, minus drawings or money drawn for private uses.

If the student will work out this exercise carefully he will find no difficulty in understanding the way in which the items of profit and loss and the items of assets and liabilities are focussed into their accounts.

It will be seen that a Profit and Loss Account is not an account of receipts and payments only, as it includes amounts accruing to the date of the account, even if they are not paid.

In addition to the items of expenditure appearing in the Profit and Loss Account, it is very usual to see two others, viz. :—

Bad Debts and Depreciation, the former representing debts that are known to be bad, and are therefore written off; and the latter representing an estimated sum for the “wear and tear” of assets—such as Machinery, Buildings, &c.

The following is a synopsis of the work given in the previous chapters :—

Purchases are entered in Purchases Journal, and each item credited to a Personal Account in the Ledger.

Sales are entered in the Sales Day Book, and the items posted to debit of persons in the Ledger. We then get the double entry :—

Drs.	Crs.
Total Purchases.	To Jones, Brown, Robinson, &c.
Smith, Perks, &c.	Total Sales.

All cash received goes to the debit of Cash (including Bank Account), all cash paid to the credit of Cash. The former is debited to individuals or accounts in the Ledger, the latter to the credit of ditto. We then get :—

Drs.	Crs.
Cash received.	Brooks, Tomes, &c.
Brown, Wages, Rent, &c.	Cash paid.

All expenses and assets appear as debits in the Ledger.

All credits represent receipts or liabilities, as, for example :—

Drs. (Expenses)	Crs. (Receipts)
Wages, Purchases, Rent, &c.	Sales, Work done, &c. or	or
(Assets)	(Liabilities)
Machinery, Buildings, Debtors, &c.	Bills Payable, Creditors.

Capital is increased by trading where there is profit, and decreased by loss.

If there is no capital in the Balance Sheet, the person is termed "insolvent," and the deficit appears as a credit.

As I have purposely left out dates and details in the accounts, the student should remember in business to give the dates (month, day, and year) correctly, also to folio carefully all the items, and to index the Ledger fully. Make all entries in the Sales and Purchases Books as fully as possible, the word "Goods," of course, being no use, give a good description, as :—

Two Bars Cast Iron, No. 5 @ 70/- £7 0 0

For the assets the entry will be :—

Sundries, Dr. :—

To H. Triumph, Capital Account 1,570 0 0

For Assets as at date :—

Sampson	50	0	0

In the Ledger there will be an entry for each asset and liability; but the Capital Account will, of course, only contain the totals of each, as under :—

H. TRIUMPH—CAPITAL ACCOUNT.

To Sundries	..	£	s	d	By Sundries	..	£	s	d
		200	0	0			1,570	0	0

The cash is not journalised, as it is entered in the Cash Book and posted direct.

In regard to the closing entries (those above are opening entries), we must take the trial balance and close the Ledger Accounts, which represent profit and loss items, by Journal entry :—

Profit and Loss Account Dr.	C	£	s	d	£	s	d
To Sundries	65	10	0
Rent, Rates, &c.				55	10	0 A
Books and Stationery				10	0	0 B
(For Expenses for the Period)
Sundries Dr.
To Profit and Loss Account				628	10	0 F
Gross Profit (Goods Account) D		620	0	0
Discounts E		8	10	0
For Receipts

Here items A and B will be posted to the credit of the accounts named, and will close them; C and F are posted to the debit and credit of the Profit and Loss Account respectively ; D and E are posted to the debit of the individual accounts, which they close.

The Journal is very useful for cross entries from one account in the Ledger to another. Take an example. Suppose that Jones, who owes £100 on a bill due 25th June, fails to meet it, we must debit him and credit Bills Receivable ; but it is much better to do this by Journal entry, which will be thus :—

	£	s	d	£	s	d
Jones, Dr.	100	0	0
To Bills Receivable				100	0	0
(For Bill No. returned this day.)

This description of the entry is called the narration.

Take another example. John Thomas is wrongly debited with £100, which should be debited to Joseph Thomas. The Journal entry will be :—

Joseph Thomas Dr. to John Thomas.

And the narration would be simply :—

“ For error in posting.”

PETTY CASH BOOK.

I made a passing reference to petty cash in the accounts, but there are one or two ways of keeping the same that, perhaps, would be useful to know. One way is to keep the petty cash as a Ledger Account, as well as having a Petty Cash Book, and draw cheques and debit the Petty Cash and credit Cash with the amounts. At the end of every month a summary of the payments is made, and the details are posted to the debit of Nominal Accounts in the Ledger and total to credit of Petty Cash in Ledger. A good way is to keep petty cash on the imprest system, which is to draw a cheque for £20, or other round sum, and at the end of the month add up the payments, and draw a cheque for the exact amount spent, and post the expenses from the Cash Book direct. In this way the first cheque is restored, and the cashier is a debtor for the amount.

I give examples of both methods below. If the petty cash is kept on the columnar system it saves time and trouble.

There are one or two more books which are very useful in a large business, and it would be well to understand their use.

First, we will take the Returns Books, called the Returns Book Inward and the Returns Book Outward respectively, the former being for all goods returned to us by a customer; the latter being for goods we return to the wholesale trader, and for which he should give us credit. As you will readily see, when a customer of ours returns goods, which either may not be up to sample or may be incorrect in description, we must credit him ; and, in like manner, when we refuse to accept goods from our traders, we must debit them in the Ledger. Therefore the entries in the one book are all posted to debits, in the other to credits.

The books are added up, and at the end of the financial period the totals are carried to Goods Account or to Sales and Purchases respectively, the totals of Returns Inwards going to the debit of one of the accounts, the Returns Outwards in total going to the credit of Goods or Purchases. In making out the Profit and Loss Account, it is usual to deduct the returns from the Sales and Purchases respectively, as under :—

	£	s	d		£	s	d
Purchases	8,025	0	0	Sales	10,548	0	0
Less Returns ..	28	0	0	Less Returns ..	79	0	0
	£7,997	0	0		£10,469	0	0

The Private Ledger.—This Ledger is used for keeping the Capital Accounts in, and the Impersonal Accounts making up the Profit and Loss Accounts and Balance Sheets, which are generally written up in detail in the book named. As the book is used for these private purposes it is frequently kept by the proprietor himself, or by the secretary of a company, and often has a lock upon it to preserve its secrecy.

Bill Books.—These are kept for the purpose of reference, and contain the particulars of all bills given and taken, and show at a glance when they become due. This saves the trouble of entering the bill at once to the Bills Receivable or Bills Payable Account in the Ledger, as they can be entered in total monthly or less often. I give sketches of same :—

THE CASH BOOK.

In the foregoing exercises I have assumed that the Cash Book was kept on the general principle of banking all moneys received and making payments by cheque, but there is another way of keeping cash that one sometimes comes across, and it is useful to know how it is worked. In this system all cash received is entered in Column 2 (see below). When any money is paid to bank an entry is made in Column 5 and another in Column 3. This is simple, if you remember that the entry is Dr. Bank, Cr. Cash. If cash is drawn from the bank the entry is made in Column 6 and another in Column 2, this being Dr. Cash, Cr. Bank. If a cheque is received, and paid direct to bank, only one entry is necessary in Column 3; and if a cheque is drawn to pay an account, only one entry is needed on the credit side in Column 6. I show some entries in the Cash Book below:—

Dr.		CASH BOOK.						Cr.
		1	2	3			4	5	6
		Disct.	Cash	Bank			Disct.	Cash	Bank
			£ s d	£ s d				£ s d	£ s d
1901					1901
Jan. 1	To Lewis	£ 1	50 0 0		Jan. 3	By Bank	✓	150 0 0
" 2	" Peters		100 0 0		"	" Wages		10 0 0
" 3	" Cash				"	" Rent		5 0 0
	" Sales		50 0 0		"	" Brooks			10 0 0
" 4	" Cash	✓		150 0 0	" 5	" Bank	✓	100 0 0
" 4	" Samuel & Co.		100 0 0		" 8	" Cash	✓		20 0 0
" 5	" Lewis		50 0 0
" 5	" Cash	✓		100 0 0
" 8	" Bank	✓	20 0 0

There is no posting folio for these particular transfers from Cash to Bank, or vice versa, but usually a tick is put to show that the folio has not been missed. This class of Cash Book is useful in the country, where business is, perhaps, some distance from a bank. Notice that Bills Receivable and Payable should not be entered in the Cash Book direct. It is advisable that all the vouchers for payments made in a Cash Book should be in order, as it is a great help to the auditors, and a great nuisance if they are all about.

EXPENSES BOOK.

In making out accounts it is necessary to remember the fact that the Profit and Loss Account for a given period represents any expenditure incurred in that given period, and so with the Sales, &c. Expenses are usually entered in the Bought Journal, and either a summary made at the end of each month or other period, or the book is kept in columns, and the totals of the columns are posted to the debit of Nominal Accounts in the Ledger. In some businesses it is rather an advantage to keep the purchases (in the strict sense of the word, I mean goods bought to sell again) separately, and to have another book for expenses, called either the "Credit Book" or simply the "Expenses Journal." If the latter is kept in columns it will save a good deal of time and trouble, as the totals can be posted each month.

I give a suitable ruling for such a Credit Book:—

One advantage of having a book for this purpose separate from the purchases is that for the latter it is advisable to give a large amount of detail of each invoice, and if a whole page is occupied with one invoice, as it sometimes is, the other columns are wasted.

CONSIGNMENT ACCOUNTS.

Consignment Accounts are not quite in the category of Elementary Bookkeeping Accounts, but a question is often set in examination papers, and it is as well to be prepared for such a contingency. When we consign goods to a man it is not a sale, because he has to sell them, and if he cannot he may return them. It is generally a question of agency, the man to whom the goods are consigned or sent acting as our agent, and he must account to us. We will suppose that we consign to H. Pratt on the 1st April 1900 goods amounting to £500. We must credit the person from whom we get the goods, but we cannot debit Pratt until we know what the goods realise, so we open an account marked "Consignment," or "Consignment to Pratt," and debit it with the value of the goods. We pay expenses amounting to £20, which we debit the Consignment Account with, and on the 1st May we receive an Account Sales, or a statement showing what he has sold, from Pratt. The account shows that the goods realised £680, but he has paid expenses £20, and his commission is £35. We therefore debit Pratt and credit the Consignment Account with the £680, and credit him and debit the Consignment Account with the expenses and commission.

When he sends cash we credit him with the cash. There should be no difficulty about the accounts, as they are all very similar.
